

Why would you need advice from a lawyer when you're getting married?

You know it's going to last forever, so is there any need to think about anything else? Definitely!

The purpose of this brochure is to provide you with some information, and advice that is often overlooked, in the leadup and emotional involvement of a marriage, or a commitment ceremony. It has been prepared at the request of a number of marriage celebrants, who want to provide a much higher level of assistance to couples intending to get married or enter into a lifetime commitment.

We have broken it down into a series of headings, with a brief explanation as to why it is important to consider these issues prior to getting married or committed.

Neville & Co. is a Melbourne-based law firm established more than 45 years ago. Our office is conveniently located in the city's Central Business District, opposite the Grand Hyatt Hotel in Collins Street. Although we are Melbourne based Lawyers, we have clients living all over Australia. Our clients regularly communicate with us via Skype, Facetime and/or WhatsApp. We also travel to most States and Territories on a regular basis, so can meet with you as needed. We, therefore, can assist people getting married or committed anywhere in Australia.

We are happy to have an initial meeting with you, without charge, to determine appropriate requirements for your circumstances. We can also provide services to you in a range of other areas of law, including the purchase of property, setting up of businesses, and a wide range of commercial advice.

We wish your relationship every success and remind you that people do not plan to fail, but they do fail to plan.

Binding Financial Agreements

In situations, particularly where parties come into a marriage or relationship with significantly unequal contributions to it, or where there are previous relationships, it is sensible to contemplate a Binding Financial Agreement. This is certainly a sensitive area, and much harder to discuss after the event, so we encourage you to at least have the discussion prior to the event in a frank and open manner, because in our experience, dealing with these issues prior to entering a relationship is always very much easier than after. The benefit of having in place a Binding Financial Agreement prior to entering a long-term commitment is that it creates certainty of outcome should circumstances change and eliminates the need for Court involvement.

Asset Protection

This is also a good time to look at protecting the assets you have or you may accumulate in the near future, as people tend not to change their Wills. Risk, particularly in business but also in life, cannot be avoided, but provided we can identify it with you, then it can be managed to minimise it.

For example, if you are self-employed, a tradesman or work in any other area in which there is some risk, it is unwise to hold assets jointly. Assets are better quarantined in the name of the partner who is not exposed to risk. In the event of a separation, and in the absence of a Binding Financial Agreement, the Family Law Court can distribute assets held by one party alone, between the parties if necessary. We are also able to advise you on a variety of appropriate structures to provide the maximum protection.

Enduring Powers of Attorney

Medical Treatment

None of us can forecast the future. If one partner falls ill unexpectedly, is involved in an accident and is unable to make decisions on medical treatment, then it is sensible to provide the other partner with an Enduring Power of Attorney for Medical Treatment to provide them with the legal power to make decisions about medical treatment.

Financial

If one partner becomes incapacitated and unable to make decisions, then again it is sensible and useful for the other party to be able to do so on their behalf by having an Enduring Power of Attorney Financial. Even more so if they are self-employed and running a business.

Wills

These days relationships can be quite complex. Often, couples marry or make commitments later in life by which time, they have accumulated assets. There are also in many situations blended marriages, with children from previous relationships.

Frequently, the parents of one of the couple might provide financial assistance for a variety of reasons, in particular, purchasing a property. They often wish to protect that loan or assistance in the event of a breakdown in the relationship. There is also a question of who will be responsible for children, and generally to ensure that the wishes of the deceased party are met.

Having a Will, and reviewing and amending it (if required) each time there is a change in your personal and/or financial circumstances, ensures your assets are managed and distributed in accordance with your wishes.

We understand that these are not issues many people wish to consider. Unfortunately, if they are not addressed, they are often left until it is too late and an event has occurred. We are happy to discuss with you either together or individually, your respective situations as most situations are different.

In many cases, a simple package of Wills and Enduring Powers of Attorney is quite adequate and a relatively inexpensive exercise. In more complicated matters, there may be a need for a Testamentary Trust.
